STEWART SCRAMBLER

Stewart arrived in Australia from Scotland with his parents and two siblings in 1956, settling in Kwinana. Stewart has taught as a sessional lecturer for TAFE, Edith Cowan and Curtin universities, delivered workshops across WA and offshore and is currently a tutor at Fremantle Arts Centre.

Stewart's wood fired kiln is on a property that he and his wife Trish own at York. Environmental concerns drive much of Stewart's practice and he and Trish grow the wood used in the kiln from seedlings. The clay used is blended using local clays so that the work is very much of the place .

Stewart has exhibited regularly within WA, interstate and overseas His work is contained in private and institutional collections across Australia and overseas

GEORGE AITKEN (NeoGeo)

In my practice I work primarily with neon glass producing one-off art pieces. Working with this medium for the last 30+ years I find producing individual pieces by hand very rewarding.

The vibrant colours of true neon can be mesmerising and changes with the contrasting ambient light through the course of the day/night due to experimentation in light refraction and reflection. The art of blowing glass is an ever evolving one. The practitioner is always learning new parameters and techniques.

NEIL KIDD

Neil Kidd is an environmental artist with a passion for recycling. He is keen to share this message through his art. "I work with found materials like sea glass, pottery pieces and old aluminium cans. I swim to retrieve rubbish and although I am often inspired with what I see under the sea I am deeply concerned with the amount of plastic rubbish in the ocean, As an environmental artist I try to use materials that would otherwise be wasted".

MICHAEL KINIGHT

Michael Knight has worked as an artist for over 20 years and is known for his vibrant palette and expressionistic response to what he sees and feels. Trained at UWA and the Julian Ashton Art School Michael's work continues to use drawing as a fundamental tool in his creative practice. His work includes portraits, landscapes, abstracts and sculptures.

LUDA KORCZYNSKYJ

This ceramic sculpture was part of the artist's body of work called Women on a Wire (2018). This exhibition was shown at Gallows Gallery West Perth and then at Petrichor Gallery in Walpole (2019).

It was a work which explored the lives of women who had been through difficult times and had been stretched either mentally physically or spiritually and had become stronger through their adversity.

This particular sculpture had an added dimension because of the shoe. The shoe was inspired by an Italian master craftsman called Salvatore Ferragamo whose work I admired, and I thought clay was the perfect choice to re-create one of his masterpieces.

HANNAH GREGORY

Hannah Gregory is an Australian stained glass artist based between Ghent, Belgium, and Australia. She has studied and worked in stained glass techniques, glazing, and architecture across Australia, the UK, Europe, and the US, developing expertise in both medieval and modern methods. Gregory specializes in traditional glass painting, etching, engraving, and lead-based creation. She has received grants from the Australia Council for the Arts, the International Specialised Skills Institute, and other organizations, and has attended residencies worldwide. Her work is featured in architecture and private collections globally. hannahmaling1949@gmail.com

JANE McNABB

Jane is a Ceramic Artist based in South Fremantle. She enjoys experimenting with different clays, forms and methods and her work is inspired by Japanese designs and delicate forms.

Over the last few years she has focussed on making ceramics using Raku and Pit Firing methods. More recently she has been drawn to natural dyeing methods to print local botanical plants.

She has extended her experimenting to the use of mordants, oxides, a boiling cauldron, and a variety of Eucalyptus plants to produce sharp and lasting imprints onto her ceramic vessels.

Jane is a member of Perth Studio Potters and CAAWA.

LAUREN RUDD

Born in England and moved to Australia at the age of 6.

In 1986 at age 18 Lauren attended the Claremont School of Art. Here she studied under Leon and Arthur Kalamaras and was introduced to the live model and classical sculptural techniques. Her work since then has been creating the female form in a representational manner.

The last 15 years have seen the recurring motive of wings included within her works. Laurens sculpted wings are to represent our subconscious, our dreams. Wearing the wings reflect the theme of having the courage to embrace your dreams and to bring them into the outer world.

The works are made in the hollow method, built up slowly as the lower clay firms and is able to support the addition of more clay. When finished the pieces are fired.

MICHAEL O'CONNELL

Michael is a Western Australian born visual artist. While he considers himself primarily a painter, the use of multi-media, printmaking, photography and drawing all form part of his personal practice.

It's Michael's intention to use humour and he is naturally drawn to visual paradoxes and puns within his artworks.

Michael has been painting for decades, and his career has included 10 solo exhibitions. He lives and paints in North Fremantle.

ANNE-MARIE McCAUGHEY

Working across many media, Anne has recently fused digital painting with traditional mark-making to create landscapes drawn from both her original home in Ireland and her current home in Australia. A four-time finalist in the Lester Prize and exhibitor in Sydney's Salon des Refuses, Anne's work is held in collections worldwide.

EMMA LINDEGAARD

Emma Lindegaard is a self-taught ceramic artist working from her shared studio space at Shacks, in Waylyup/Fremantle. Her objects are built entirely by hand – using the coiling method and minimal tools – over a number of days. This process allows for thoughtful modification of shape, texture and balance.

Emma's on-going development in abstract sculpture is born out of time spent immersed in the landscape, drawing inspiration from rock formations and natural structures. Each piece is a unique expression, often led by an exploration of negative space, organic curves and clean lines; allowing room throughout the process for spontaneity, instinct and experimentation to inform the final piece.

Typically, minimal yet refined surface-finishing methods complete each piece– to honour the earthiness of the raw medium, and to emphasise the form. Textural glazes and slips are added to create a tactile response, connecting viewer with object; grounding them in time and place.

ROSEY HELM

Through my Arts practice I endeavour to engage an audience and influence patterns of thought. I aim to promote questions about the social and political issues of our time and assist in activating change.

My current work explores the ecological impact of single use objects on the environment. These objects are decontextualised and manipulated and when placed in a gallery environment they take on a new life as objects of art.

NATHAN HOYLE

These paintings document 'the process' of painting - they show the raw thinking, the testing, the urgency of the studio. They reflect thoughts, ideas, feelings - all unfinished and transient.

Line, colour, shape, pause. Add, remove, add, remove.

Like life, making a painting is a process that unfolds with predictable uncertainty.

This art work plays with the themes of urgency, imbalance and incongruence - while still finding a unified whole. My paintings are often a product of each other, sharing colour, ideas, patterns and resolution. I try to remain playful in the studio and I hope these paintings draw you into this. All work is presented finished and varnished.

VIRGINIA WARD

My work is about nothing, the No Thing. I assist their pilgrimage through the privileged status of Art's authentic aesthetic value.

I use the materials as they come to me. No more than a dust or wash. I do not cut them. Minimal intervention. I clean and sort into similar size and shapes. Seek out their inherent referents, finding underlying possibilities so that their truth can manifest both materially and metaphysical.

Creating a synergy of opposites initiating transubstantiation from quantity into quality, the profane to the profound, trash to treasure. Finding the extraordinary in the ordinary, evoking the sublime in the everyday. The apparent meaninglessness reveals the profound nature of materiality.

SHUPIWE CHONGWE

Shupiwe Chongwe is a visual artist based in Walyalup (Fremantle), mainly focusing on clay and ceramics. She began experimenting with ceramics under the direction of her father, ceramicist Njalikwa Chongwe of Zinongo Gallery, later studying at North Metropolitan TAFE (Boorloo/Perth) and continuing to practice from her own studio. Within her multidisciplinary practice, Chongwe creates sculptural works from clay that reflect her connection to family, mixed cultural heritage, and the natural environment. Exploring tensions between the longstanding rivalry of art and craft, Shupiwe focuses on creating work that is tactile and honours the earth it came from. Shupiwe also teaches ceramics at a range of different locations and makes functional ceramic vessels.

PETA MILLAR

Peta Millar is an established visual artist living and working in Fremantle. She is inspired by the port city and also by the Australian landscape, especially the Kimberley area in the north. Her works are in private collections nationally.

JEN KERR

Jen Kerr creates ceramic tableware, plates and platters, that explore the 'in between', the places formed where the land meets the sea, the forest meets the river, the wild meets the cultivated. Made by slumping slabs of clay over a plaster mould, the forms become canvases for glaze to flux, fuse and flow in the kiln.

Her practice is an ongoing experiment with glaze combinations that, for her evoke connection to and awe of our stunning ancient land, sea and sky.

She shares a studio with her husband Bernard, in the Jarrah-Marri forest on the Darling Scarp – KattaMorda, on Noongar Booja.

FREYA HALL

Freya Hall paints portraits and figurative works although over the last year she has been creating abstract florals and pattern-based works. Recurring subjects include nasturtiums, pigface, antique tiles and wrought iron furniture. These motifs are deeply sentimental to her, collected from walks around Fremantle with her son and tied to memories of similar walks she took as a child growing up.

Working with oils on canvas, Freya will continue to focus on this body of work for the foreseeable future, working towards an exhibition at the end of the year.

Her practice is primarily centred around medium to large-scale oil paintings on canvas.

Hailing from Appalachia and living in Fremantle, Laura Mitchell is a practicing visual artist and musician, a former 'dot com' art director, and a passionate educator/researcher. Her visual works have been exhibited and collected internationally. She was the violinist with former Free band Trio

Alegra and continues to teach and collaborate locally and abroad. Recent projects include a practice-led arts PhD, supported by a 3.5-year HDRS scholarship and completed first class in 2022.
